Recommendations

Enabling more personal economic freedom, by reducing regulation and taxes, encouraging greater entrepreneurialism amongst young people, and ensuring high quality job opportunities are available to all.

Public spending and policy reform increasing public spending on health and social care, in order to remove barriers to attaining key life goals and financial stability, including drug and alcohol abuse and mental health challenges, as well as a more general refocusing of public policy on the needs of younger generations, for example to address the pressures of the housing market and to tackle global issues that concern them, such as climate change.

Educational reform

Reimagining and reforming education away from its theoretical traditions towards a more open system which encourages greater sensitivity and tolerance, by teaching life skills, ethics and empathy, providing careers advice and sex education, promoting diversity and discussion, and valuing volunteering and cultural participation;

Participation

Encouraging greater participation and collective action to refresh politics and civic society, by promoting youth governance, direct democracy and activism, as well as harnessing the resources of youth organisations and digital platforms to support the building of confidence, agency and trust amongst young people and across wider society.

Tolerance and freedom

Promoting greater tolerance and freedom in Polish society, through the above actions and by galvanising the NGO and non-profit sector to promote greater dialogue and celebrate difference and diversity in Polish society.
